

Anna Boeri
Assistant Penguin Teacher

Originally from Baltimore County, Maryland, Anna moved to the DC area after graduating from Stanford University. There, she earned a bachelor's degree in psychology with a focus on health and development. Anna adores working with children and has experience working with them in a number of settings, including at a residential treatment center, as a coach for an after-school sports program, and as a student teacher at a preschool in Stanford, California.

Anna began working at Early Years in May 2014 as the Penguin Assistant teacher and she is thrilled to continue working in the Penguin classroom this year! She is excited to be a part of the growth and development of all the new Penguins and is looking forward to a fun-filled school year!

When Anna isn't teaching preschool she enjoys painting (particularly watercolor), doing yoga, and cooking healthy meals. She also works part-time as a therapist for children with autism, and is trained in Applied Behavior Analysis.
